

Table of contents

Introduction	9
CHAPTER ONE
Communication	13
1.1 Defining communication	13
1.2 Diverse traditions in communication theory	14
1.3 Fundamental models of communication	16
1.3.1 Linear models	17
1.3.1.1 Aristotle	17
1.3.1.2 Shannon and Weaver's mathematical model of the communication process	18
1.3.1.2.1 Noise	19
1.4 Selected contemporary approaches to communication	20
1.4.1 Communication effectiveness, successfulness and comfortability in the DRAAM model	20
1.4.1.1 Communication niches in the human communication ecosystem	22
1.4.2 Constructivist model of communication	24
1.5 Marketing as a part of business communication	25
CHAPTER TWO
Mass communication	27
2.1 Levels of communication	27
2.2 Conceptual model of (mass) communication	28
2.3 Marxism and the Frankfurt School as the foundation of Critical Theory	29
2.4 Traditional typology of mass media	30
2.5 Mass media as institutions meeting needs	32
2.6 Mass media as institutions exerting power	35
2.7 The evolution of mass media effects	36
CHAPTER THREE
Persuasive discourse of advertising	39
3.1 Communication as a practical art of rhetoric	39
3.2 Defining discourse	41
3.3 Persuasion	42
3.4 Persuasive discourse of advertising	43
3.5 Propaganda	44
3.6 Nazi propaganda as an example of early modern persuasion	45

CHAPTER FOUR
Theoretical background of marketing persuasion	47
4.1 Persuasive strategies of advertising discourse vs. consumer behaviour	47
4.2 The application of motivational theories in advertising	49
4.3 Compliance gaining strategies as the basis of an advertising message	51
4.4 Purchase behaviour determined by cognitive dissonance and attitude formation	53
4.5 Intentionality and its causative role	56
CHAPTER FIVE
Key ideas of pragmatics with reference to advertising	59
5.1 The essence of pragmatics	59
5.2 Pragmatic principles of discourse	60
5.3 Face work, politeness strategies and their application in advertising	61
CHAPTER SIX
Advertising as a constituent of mass communication	65
6.1 Brief history of advertising	65
6.2 How to define advertising	66
6.3 Advertising as an example of mass communication	67
6.4 Objectives and functions of advertisements	68
6.5 Typology of advertisements	69
6.5.1 Media-based typology	70
6.5.1.1 Broadcast advertising	70
6.5.1.1.1 Radio commercials	70
6.5.1.1.2 Television advertising	71
6.5.1.1.3 Internet/online advertising	73
6.5.1.2 Press advertising	73
6.5.1.3 Outdoor advertising	74
6.5.1.4 Above-the-Line vs. Below-the-Line advertising	76
6.5.2 Technique-based typology	77
6.5.2.1 Reason vs. tickle advertising	77
6.5.2.2 Soft-sell vs. hard sell	79
6.5.2.3 Slow drip vs. sudden burst	79
6.6 Press advertisements vs. a model of integrated cross-modal and multimodal communication	80
CHAPTER SEVEN
The concept of resources and their management	83
7.1 High, moderate and low resources of the human communicating agent	83
7.2 The management of language resources in Oskar, Gulliver, and Petronus Syndrome	85
7.3 Operational fitness	86
7.4 Dichotomy of the brain	87
7.5 Signs and symbols as representations of reality in the composition of the advertising message	88

7.6 Codes	91
7.7 Context in advertising	92
7.8 Culture-specific values in advertisements	94
 CHAPTER EIGHT
Language resources and their management in press advertising	97
8.1 Language and language resources	97
8.2 Linguistic elements in the verbal delivery of body copy	98
8.2.1 Adjectives, modifiers, and quantifiers	99
8.2.2 Personal pronouns, possessive pronouns, and adjuncts	100
8.2.3 Pseudoscientific words, mimicry, and interrogative sentences	102
8.2.4 Proverbs, metaphors, comparisons, rhymes, and other stylistic devices ..	103
8.3 The language of advertising in a daily routine niche	104
8.4 Text interpretation	104
8.5 The functions of slogans	105
8.6 English in Polish advertising	106
 CHAPTER NINE
Non-language resources and their management in press advertising	109
9.1 Nonverbal communication	109
9.2 Non-language resources in an advertising message	110
9.3 The process of visual perception	111
9.3.1 Spatial relation of objects	112
9.3.2 Colours	115
9.4 Graphic design of artwork in press advertisements	117
9.5 Guidelines on the body copy	118
9.5.1 Font and typeface	118
9.5.2 Layout	119
9.5.3 Positioning	120
9.5.4 The importance of cultural specificity	120
9.6 Guidelines on headings	121
9.7 Emotional load	122
 CHAPTER TEN
The profile of the participant of an advertising message	125
10.1 Narrator credibility	125
10.2 Endorsement	126
10.2.1 Celebrity endorsement	126
10.3 Stereotypes	128
 CHAPTER ELEVEN
Empirical research on language and non-language resources in Polish press advertisements	131
11.1 The research from a communicative perspective	131
11.2 Aim and assumption of the study	131

11.3 General and specific hypotheses	131
11.4 Method	133
11.4.1 Research tool	133
11.4.2 Data collection	134
11.4.3 Data interpretation	134
11.5 Results of the study and discussion	135
11.5.1 Verification of language resources management	135
11.5.2 Verification of non-language resources management	142
11.5.2.1 Technique and graphic layout	142
11.5.2.2 Participant	148
11.5.3 Summary of the research results	160
11.6 Limitations of the study	161
Final conclusions	163
References	167
List of figures	179
List of tables	183
Appendix	185
Postrzeganie zasobów językowych i niejęzykowych w reklamie prasowej: perspektywa ekolingwistyczno-komunikologiczna (Streszczenie)	189
The perception of language and non-language resources in press advertisements: an ecolinguistic-communicative approach (Summary)	191