Contents

Introduction 7

Chapter One
The universal versus subjective aspects of relations in pragmatics 13
1.1. Philosophical views on relations 13
1.2. Scientific view of relations 18
1.3. Relations in pragmatics 24

Chapter Two
On the idea of universal pragmatics 39
2.1. Focus on universals 39
2.2. On the concept of rationality 44
2.3. Pragmatic universals according to Jürgen Habermas 52

Chapter Three
Transcendental Pragmatics and Hermeneutics 65
3.1. Introduction 65
3.2. Kant's transcendental philosophy 66
3.3. Apel's transcendental pragmatics 76
3.4. Gadamer's hermeneutics 91

Chapter Four
On intersubjectivity in science, philosophy and pragmatics 97
4.1. Introduction 97
4.2. Pragmatics and intersubjectivity 98
4.3. Science and intersubjectivity 111
4.4. Philosophy and intersubjectivity 113

Chapter Five
Affective pragmatics and the psychological construction of emotion ... 125
5.1. Introduction – the philosophical background 125

5.2. The philosphical cognitivism vs. affectivism
as two rival traditions in the account of emotions 126
5.3. Affect in modern science 134
5.4. Scientists and philosophers in the debate on affect 139
5.5. The psychological construction of emotions 141

Chapter Six
Relating Affect and Context to Action: A Theoretical Grounding 153
6.1. Introduction 153
6.2. The dissolution of actions into beliefs and desires 154
6.3. Can beliefs cause actions? 157
6.4. Unemotional desires in desirable actions 162
6.5. Affect-free actions or where have all the emotions gone? 165
6.6. Summary and conclusions 171

Chapter Seven
Human communication as action: An inquiry into the explanatory power of pragmatics 173
7.1. Introduction 173
7.2. Focus on causes and effects 175
7.3. Focus on reasons and actions 178
7.4. Focus on explanation and understanding 185
7.5. Focus on context 188
7.6. Summary and conclusions 192

Chapter Eight
Naturalized Epistemology and modern pragmatics 195
8.1. Introduction 195
8.2. Quine's naturalistic empiricism 196
8.2.1. The naturalistic-behavioristic view of language 198
8.2.2. Indeterminacy of translation 199
8.3. Quine's holism 204
8.4. Meaning and use 206
8.5. Philosophy versus science 209
8.6. Summary and conclusions 214

References 221

Filozofia i pragmatyka. Spojrzenie krytyczne (Streszczenie) 233