

Contents

Introduction .....	7
Chapter 1
Philosophical Shakespeare, philosophical Marlowe – on the question of theory .....	19
1.1. New philosophical analysis after the Theory .....	19
1.2. Cultural materialism and new historicism .....	22
1.3. Philosophical analysis .....	28
1.4. “New historical philosophising” – a combined method .....	41
1.5. “Whose Nietzsche?” – on the multiplicity of nietzschanisms .....	47
1.6. The Nietzschean vision of the Renaissance and Shakespeare .....	59
1.7. Nietzsche about Shakespeare .....	65
Chapter 2
The awakening of early-modern subjectivity: ambition, aspiration and over-reaching in the Renaissance .....	75
2.1. Individualism and the early-modern .....	76
2.1.1. Philosophical and religious reflection .....	76
2.1.1.1. Early-modern death of God: Renaissance scepticism ...	77
2.1.1.2. Lucretius: existentialist sceptic .....	80
2.1.1.3. Pomponazzi: moral relativity .....	84
2.1.1.4. Montaigne: active nihilism .....	86
2.1.1.5. Atheist/sceptical stances in England .....	91
2.1.1.6. Shakespeare, Marlowe and the Elizabethan world-picture .....	94
2.1.2. Political theology, political theory and political reality .....	96
2.1.2.1. Niccolò Machiavelli – will to power and overhuman potential .....	102
2.1.2.2. Shakespeare, Marlowe and political theory .....	108
2.2. Ambition in early-modern England .....	109
Chapter 3
Vicious greatness: Tamburlaine and Barabas .....	119
3.1. Tamburlaine ( Tamburlaine, the great ) .....	121

3.1.1. Critical responses to Tamburlaine, the great and interpretative paths .....	121
3.1.2. “And in his eyes the furies of his heart/ menacing revenge” – Tamburlaine (Tamb. 1, 3.2.72-73) .....	129
3.2. Barabas ( The Jew of Malta ) .....	149
3.2.1. Critical responses to The Jew of Malta and interpretative paths.....	149
3.2.2. “Barabas is born to better chance, And framed of finer mould than common men” – Barabas (Jew, 1.2.218-219) ....	154
 Chapter 4
Breaking the bonds of progenitors: Brutus, Macbeth and Edmund .....	171
4.1. Brutus ( Julius Caesar ) .....	172
4.1.1. Critical responses to Julius Caesar and interpretative paths ....	172
4.1.2. “I love/ The name of honour more than I fear death” – Brutus (Julius Caesar, 1.2.88-89) .....	178
4.2. Macbeth ( Macbeth ) .....	197
4.2.1. Critical responses to Macbeth and interpretative paths .....	197
4.2.2. “Blood will have blood” – Macbeth (Macbeth, 3.4.152) .....	204
4.3. Edmund ( King Lear ) .....	223
4.3.1. Critical responses to Edmund and interpretative paths .....	223
4.3.2. “Thou, Nature, art my goddess. To thy law/ My services are bound” – Edmund (Lear, 1.2.1-2) .....	227
 Chapter 5
Das Überweib in Shakespeare’s and Marlowe’s plays: Lady Macbeth, Zenocrate and Lear’s daughters .....	247
5.1. Nietzsche and the feminine, the Renaissance and the feminine .....	249
5.2. Critical responses and interpretative paths on Lady Macbeth and Marlowe’s women .....	252
5.3. Lady Macbeth and Zenocrate .....	257
5.4. Critical responses to Lear’s daughters and interpretative paths .....	271
5.5. Goneril, Regan and Cordelia .....	274
 Conclusion .....	 299
 Reinterpretacja „nadczołowieczego” potencjału w Renesansie: jednostki o wyjątkowo silnej ambicji (ang. „overreachers”) w dramatach Marlowe’a i Szekspira w świetle filozofii Nietzschego. (Streszczenie) .....	   305
References .....	311