

Table of contents

List of figures	9
Introduction	11
Chapter 1
Russian Cosmism	19
1.1. Russian Cosmism: Toward a definition	20
1.1.1. Cosmism in the context of 19th and early 20th century Russian philosophy, culture and literature	25
1.1.2. Mystic, esoteric and occult dimensions of Cosmism	27
1.1.3. Religious and scientific Cosmists	31
1.2. Nikolai Fedorov and the Common task	32
1.3. Religious Cosmists	40
1.3.1. Vladimir Solov'ev	40
1.3.2. Sergei Bulgakov and Pavel Florenskii	4,3
1.3.3. Nikolai Berdiaev	50
1.3.3.1. A nationalist dimension of Cosmism: Berdiaev and the Russian Soul	52
1.3.4. Conclusion	64
1.4. Scientific Cosmists	65
1.4.1. Alexandr Sukhovo-Kobylin: The forerunner of scientific Cosmism	65
1.4.2. Konstantin Tsiolkovskii	67
1.4.3. Aleksandr Chizhevskii, Vladimir Vernadskii and Vasilii Kuprevich	72
1.4.4. Conclusion	77
1.5. Cosmism and its impact on selected aspects of 20th century Russian and Soviet culture	79
1.6. Concluding remarks. the present day status of Cosmism	79
Chapter 2
American Cosmism	97
2.1. Outer space and space exploration in light of the humanities	98

2.2. Defining a space-oriented philosophy, astroculture and space ethos	101
2.2.1. Astroculture	104
2.2.2. Space ethos	105
2.3. American Cosmism	110
2.3.1. Spaceflight as a religious experience	111
2.3.1.1. Textual and visual evidence	113
2.3.1.2. Sacred texts, rituals and spaceflight adherents	123
2.3.1.3. The Overview Effect	125
2.3.2. The visionaries of space travel	131
2.3.3. The role of national mythologies in envisioning space endeavours	136
2.3.4. Science, esotericism and the occult in American Cosmism ..	143
2.3.4.1. The Overview Effect as a salvational worldview: Textual and visual evidence	144
2.3.4.2. The New Age and its impact on American Cosmism	155
2.3.4.3. SETI as a parapsychical and occultist phenomenon	162
2.4. Concluding remarks. comparing Russian and American Cosmism	170

Chapter 3

American and Soviet space art in the context of 20th culture and literature	177
3.1. American and russian definitions of space art	177
3.2. The history of american and Soviet space art	188
3.2.1. Literary beginnings	188
3.2.2. Space art in non-fiction works	197
3.2.3. The rise of space art in American and Soviet magazines and popular science texts	200
3.2.4. Space art in print and broadcast media since the 1940s	203
3.2.4.1. The American cultural and literary context	203
3.2.4.2. The Soviet cultural and literary context	214
3.3. The American tradition of space art	220
3.3.1. The Hudson River School influences: The sublime and the picturesque	220
3.3.2. Realist influences: Manifest Destiny, the NASA Art Programme and the IAAA	225
3.4. The Soviet tradition of space art	229
3.4.1. Space art in the U.S.S.R. Union of Artists	229
3.4.2. The influence of propaganda	230
3.4.3. Realist, romantic and symbolic influences	234

3.5. The impact of 20th century advances in space research and exploration on space art	237
3.6. Concluding remarks. The current trends in contemporary space art	244
 Chapter 4
The impact of Russian and American Cosmism on the representation of space exploration in selected works of American and Soviet space art	249
4.1. The life and works of Chesley Bonestell, Nikolai Kolchitskii, Robert McCall and Andrei Sokolov	250
4.1.1. Chesley Bonestell	250
4.1.2. Nikolai Kolchitskii	254
4.1.3. Robert McCall	258
4.1.4. Andrei Sokolov	262
4.2. Data collection	266
4.2.1. Chesley Bonestell's and Nikolai Kolchitskii's works	268
4.2.2. Robert McCall's and Andrei Sokolov's works	272
4.3. Research methodology: Visual content analysis	275
4.3.1. The coding categories	276
4.3.2. Anticipated relationships between coding categories and Cosmism	281
4.4. Research results	290
4.4.1. Statistical results: Analyzing individual artists' works	290
4.4.1.1. Type of scene	292
4.4.1.2. Extraterrestrial and remaining objects	293
4.4.1.3. Human figures	295
4.4.1.4. Space technology and status symbols	300
4.4.2. Statistical results: Comparing American and Soviet works	302
4.4.3. Interpreting statistical results	317
4.4.3.1. The impact of Russian Cosmism on Kolchitskii's and Sokolov's works	317
4.4.3.2. The impact of American Cosmism on Bonestell's and McCall's works	327
4.5. Concluding results. the impact of cosmism on American and Soviet space art	337
 Conclusion	 343
 Wpływ amerykańskiego i rosyjskiego kosmizmu na obraz podboju kosmosu w XX-wiecznej amerykańskiej i radzieckiej sztuce kosmicznej (Streszczenie)	 347
References	357

Appendix

Complete list of Chesley Bonestell's, Nikolai Kolchitskii's, Robert Mccall's and Andrei Sokolov's works	387
--	-----