

Contents

Acknowledgements .....	9
List of Tables .....	11
List of Figures .....	17
List of Abbreviations .....	19
Introduction .....	23
Chapter One
Phonotactics of Polish .....	25
1.1. Introduction .....	25
1.2. The definition and scope of phonotactics .....	25
1.3. Descriptive phonotactics of Polish .....	26
1.4. Sources of consonant clusters .....	31
1.5. The syllable structure .....	32
1.6. The role of sonority in syllable formation .....	36
1.7. Markedness .....	43
1.8. Formal approaches to Polish phonotactics .....	45
1.9. The status of medial clusters and syllabification .....	48
1.10. The summary .....	51
Chapter Two
Natural Phonology and (mor)phonotactics .....	53
2.1. Introduction .....	53
2.2. Natural Phonology .....	53
2.3. Beats-and-Binding phonotactics .....	57
2.4. Morphotactics .....	63
2.4.1. Concatenative sources of Polish morphotactics .....	65
2.4.1.1. Terminology .....	67
2.4.1.2. The scope of morphotactics and the principles of morphotactic analysis .....	68
2.4.1.3. Morphotactically relevant suffixes .....	69

2.4.1.4. Morphophonotactically relevant prefixes .....	81
2.4.1.5. Morpheme-internal clusters (affixes) .....	82
2.4.1.6. Inflectional affixes triggering morphonotactic clusters .....	84
2.4.2. Non-concatenative sources of morphonotactic clusters in Polish .....	85
2.4.3. Qualitative and quantitative changes in the word structure ..	88
2.4.4. Polish morphonotactics in written corpora .....	89
2.4.5. Subbranches of morphology and their contribution to cluster formation .....	94
2.4.6. Morphonotactics: Directions for future research .....	96

Chapter Three

Phonotactics in areas of external evidence .....	99
3.1. Introduction .....	99
3.2. First language acquisition .....	99
3.2.1. Preliminaries .....	99
3.2.2. Milestones in L1 development .....	101
3.2.3. Phonological development .....	102
3.2.4. First language acquisition in Natural Linguistics .....	110
3.2.5. Lexical and morphological development .....	112
3.2.6. Phonotactic acquisition .....	117
3.2.6.1. Early days .....	117
3.2.6.2. Asymmetries in the acquisition of word-initial and -final clusters .....	118
3.2.6.3. Cluster modification strategies .....	120
3.2.6.4. The role of sonority in reduction patterns .....	121
3.2.6.5. The role of morphological boundaries .....	126
3.2.6.6. Studies of Polish phonotactics .....	127
3.3. Casual speech processes .....	131
3.3.1. Factors inducing phonostylistic processes .....	132
3.3.2. Factors affecting consonant cluster reduction rates .....	134
3.3.3. Polish consonant clusters in casual speech .....	137
3.3.3.1. The pronunciation norm and sociophonetic variation in Polish .....	138
3.3.3.2. Cluster simplification in Polish .....	144
3.4. Phonotactics in language processing .....	151
3.4.1. Studies on processing phonotactic patterns .....	152

3.4.2. Representing morphologically complex words in the mind .....	163
3.5. The summary .....	164

Chapter Four

The acquisition of (mor)phonotactics: An empirical study .....	167
4.1. Introduction to the empirical part .....	167
4.2. Study I: The acquisition of Polish (mor)phonotactics – Research design .....	168
4.2.1. Aims and research questions .....	168
4.2.2. Data, participants and procedures .....	169
4.2.3. Rules of morphological division .....	176
4.3. Results .....	182
4.3.1. General quantitative data .....	182
4.3.2. Cluster modification strategies .....	185
4.3.3. Hypotheses 1, 2 and 3: Preferability and morphology .....	188
4.3.4. Hypothesis 4: Directionality of cluster reduction .....	196
4.3.5. Statistical analysis with all the factors .....	205
4.3.5.1. Analysis 1: NAD and sonority included as binary measures of cluster goodness .....	207
4.3.5.2. Analysis 2: NAD and sonority included as scalar measures of cluster goodness .....	211
4.4. Discussion .....	214

Chapter Five

(Mor)phonotactics in casual speech .....	219
5.1. Aims and research questions .....	219
5.2. Material and procedures .....	220
5.3. Sociophonetic variation and pronunciation targets: adjustment ..	223
5.4. Results .....	225
5.4.1. General quantitative information .....	225
5.4.2. Cluster modification vs cluster length .....	226
5.4.3. Cluster modification strategies .....	228
5.4.4. Cluster preferability (as measured by binary NAD and sonority) and morphology .....	229
5.4.5. Directionality of cluster reduction .....	237
5.4.6. Emergent clusters .....	243

5.5. Statistical analysis with all the factors .....	244
5.5.1. Analysis 1: binary NAD and SON as measures of phonotactic preferability.....	244
5.5.2. Analysis 2: scalar NAD and sonority as measures of clusters preferability .....	248
5.6. Discussion .....	251
 Chapter Six
(Mor)phonotactics in cluster processing .....	255
6.1. The background and hypothesis .....	255
6.2. Study 1: ‘Split a CCC cluster’ test .....	255
6.2.1. Materials .....	256
6.2.2. Participants and procedures .....	257
6.2.3. The extent of replicability .....	258
6.2.4. Results and statistical analysis .....	259
6.2.5. Discussion .....	262
6.3. Study 2: Lexical decision task .....	262
6.3.1. Materials .....	262
6.3.2. Procedure .....	264
6.3.3. The degree of replicability .....	265
6.3.4. Results and analysis .....	265
6.3.5. Discussion .....	267
 Conclusion .....	269
 References .....	279
 Appendix .....	305
 Mor(fonotaktyka) języka polskiego w procesie nabywania języka ojczystego, mowie łączonej oraz przetwarzaniu zbitek (Streszczenie) .....	353